

Yaron Lahav is an Assistant Professor of Finance at the department of business administration of the Guilford Glazer Faculty of Business and Management. His areas of expertise are behavioral and experimental finance and decision making, but his research also involves the area of international tax and transfer pricing. Yaron teaches several courses in finance, which includes “Introductory Finance”, “Financial Economics”, “Behavioral Finance” and “Public Finance”.

Prior to his current position, Yaron was a senior consultant in the transfer pricing group of Deloitte Tax LLP in their national offices in Washington DC. He was also a financial manager at the Israeli Aerospace Industries and an economist in an Agro-Biotechnology start-up. Yaron also consulted several companies regarding their transfer pricing policy and assisted research institutions in various projects.

Yaron received his PhD in economics from Emory University in 2007, and a B.Sc.Agr in agricultural economics and management from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He was an adjunct professor at the economics department of American University and a visiting faculty at the economics department of the University of Michigan.