The introduction will focus on theories of Freud and Erikson and research on processes between and within individuals related to these theories. The second semester will address theories of object relations, theories and researchers based on humanistic approaches, and topics related to temperament differences.

During the first semester, students will submit one work (70% of the grade) and at the end of the semester there will be an examination on the material covered during the semester (30%). In order to pass the course requirements, a grade of 65% or higher is required on the examination. The course reading is available in print and High Learn. You may add additional items to this list according to your learning needs. The teacher is happy to discuss questions and topics related to the course material.

Schedule of lectures - Spring 2024

A. Introduction to personality theories according to Freud (Chapter 1)

B. The general model of the cognitive process - Chapters 1 and 2

