Amia Lieblich is a professor of psychology and an author of numerous academic and popular books based on life stories. Her main research has dealt with individuals and communities in Israel, for example studies of the mandatory military service, prisoners of war and Kibbutz members. Together with Josselson and McAdams she has edited the series "The Narrative Study of Lives", and together with Tuval-Mashiach and Zilber, she authored "Narrative research: Reading, interpretation and analysis". Her recent work titled "Narratives of positive aging" was published by Oxford University Press.

Ruthellen Josselson, Ph.D. is Professor of clinical psychology at The Fielding Graduate University. She was formerly a Professor at The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, a visiting Professor at Harvard University School of Education and a Visiting Fellow at Cambridge University. She is a co-founder of the Society for Qualitative Inquiry in Psychology and editor of the APA Journal, Qualitative Psychology. With Amia Lieblich, she co-edited eleven volumes of The Narrative Study of Lives, a series dedicated to publishing qualitative research. She received both the Henry A. Murray Award and the Theodore R. Sarbin Award from the American Psychological Association as well as a Fulbright Fellowship. Based on interviews she has conducted over 35 years, she has written two books exploring women's identity longitudinally (Finding Herself and Revising Herself), and is currently at work on the next installment. Many of her other books (The Space Between Us, Best Friends, Playing Pygmalion) are based on interviews, and she has authored many journal articles and book chapters that explore the theory and practice of qualitative inquiry. Recently, she has authored Interviewing for Qualitative Inquiry: A Relational Approach. She has conducted workshops on qualitative inquiry in France, Norway, Finland, Israel and England as well as in the US.
