Course description & objectives:

This course will give an introduction to creative African literatures in English as they have developed over the past century, with a focus on the diversity of genres and traditions that are embedded into Anglophone literatures. Contextualizing creative works within their political, historical, and cultural contexts, we will use literature as a lens through which to explore the specificities of Southern, Western, Eastern, and Northern African traditions. Taking fiction, poetry, and drama as primary texts, the course will introduce key theoretical approaches for analyzing literary works. With a theoretical grounding in Global South epistemologies, we will examine several key themes through which the idea of “Africaness” is negotiated and constructed: orality and orature, communalism (Ubuntu), colonialism and postcolonialism, independence and post-independence, gender, religion and enchantment (animism and Christianity/Islam), as well as formal and informal education. Through this, we will problematize—while also developing methods for—reading literature as an engagement with social and political concerns.
