Knowledge-How: An Informational Perspective

Dr. Nir Fresco

Ben-Gurion University of the Negev

Abstract: The distinction between Knowledge-that and Knowledge-how has been the focus of an ongoing epistemological debate. In this talk, we discuss several problems faced by proposition-based theories of Knowledge-how pertaining to (1) animal cognition, (2) computational load, and (3) automation and skill acquisition. We propose an information-theoretic framework in which these problems can be addressed. On this proposal, Knowledge-how can be understood as a relation amongst an agent, affordances, and a bearer of functional information.

The talk will be given in English.
