

Seminar 206-24971- 2 credits

Prof. Chaim Benjamini

Syllabus

Aside from presence at the weekly department lecture, there is an additional, one-time requirement of active participation. A staff member assigns the student a topic which is not part of his thesis work. The student must develop the topic including background material, collect scientific papers in which the topic is developed from several perspectives, and present it in a written composition, abstract, bibliographic references, and in an oral presentation. This course is usually taken in the third semester of the MSc

Bibliography

Bibliography will be given by the advisor.
